

Keep Food Allergic Students Safe

Support the Campaign for Megann's Law Today!

Montreal student Megann Ayotte Lefort was only 6 years old when she suffered a fatal food allergy and asthma reaction at school. Hers was a shocking tragedy, as well as a highly preventable death.

Now you can help the Coalition for Megann's Law to prevent another child from suffering a similar fate. Please send a letter today asking the Quebec Ministers of Health and Education to create Megann's Law – legislation that will mandate overdue allergy prevention measures in our schools.

Simply personalize your electronic letter to the ministers here:

Megann's Law would:

- Require schools to take a few specific precautions to protect students at risk of allergic and asthmatic reactions.
- Mandate consistent, annual training of teaching staff in Quebec schools so that they know the easy emergency steps that will save allergic children's lives.

For the sake of the 72,000 Quebec students with food allergies and the tens of thousands more with asthma, let's ask the government to pass Megann's Law. Let's keep allergic children safe in their schools.

Thank you kindly for your participation – and for sharing the news of this campaign.
